Rich Experience of Japanese Culture Combined with Museum's Spring Festival

Just a short walk from the museum, the Imperial Palace grounds and Chidorigafuchi Moat are renowned as some of Japan's premier cherry blossom-viewing spots, making them ideal for springtime strolls. To accompany the blooming of cherry blossoms in the surrounding area, the museum will present the "Spring Festival" where Kawai Gyokudo's "Parting Spring," an Important Cultural Property depicting cherry blossoms, can only be displayed once a year due to the fragility of the Japanese-style painting. In addition, the museum will showcase masterpieces featuring spring flowers of Japan.

In the front yard, enjoy a relaxing break while viewing the cherry blossoms at its Japanese-style resting spot, where the museum will also sell original spring-themed goods.
