COMUNICATO STAMPA ••• CONTENUTO PROMOZIONALE

More than 2,000 gathered to see the future of industry AI

AOP Health, Boehringer Ingelheim, GSK, Haleon, MSD, Novo Nordisk, Roche, Sanofi, and Sobi among leaders sharing strategies to streamline and connect operations

BARCELONA, Spain, June 4, 2026 /PRNewswire/ ••• At the recent Veeva R&D and Quality Summit Europe held on 28-29 May in Copenhagen, Denmark, Veeva Systems (NYSE: VEEV) showcased its upcoming Veeva Falcon agentic labor platform and new Vault AI innovations. Leaders from across the industry ••• including AOP Health, Boehringer Ingelheim, GSK, MSD, Novo Nordisk, Roche, and Sanofi ••• shared their successes and how they are simplifying and standardizing operations and establishing a scalable path for AI.

Veeva shared Vault AI Agents available today and the planned release of Vault AI across all Vault applications in August 2026. The company also previewed Veeva Falcon agentic labor to reduce cost, increase speed, and maintain compliance in drug development. Planned for early adopters in late 2026, Falcon agentic labor will initially focus on trial master file document intake and quality control, health authority correspondence in regulatory, and safety case triage and intake.

The event brought together over 2,000 clinical, regulatory, safety, and quality leaders for more than 100 sessions. Insights shared included:

Accelerating development and manufacturing with connected clinical, regulatory, and quality

Advancing clinical and site collaboration with unified data

Modernizing quality, safety, and compliance for increased productivity

•••The ideas shared and connections made at Veeva Summit will extend far beyond the event to move the industry to an agentic future,â• said Rik van Mol, senior vice president, Veeva Development Cloud.

• Vault AI and Veeva Falcon are a significant step in AI-enabling life sciences for greater speed and efficiency. •
