COMUNICATO STAMPA - CONTENUTO PROMOZIONALE

AI-powered enhancement streamlines workflows for communicators and strengthens PR Newswire's industry-leading solutions for global campaigns.

LONDON, June 8, 2026 /PRNewswire/ - To enable global organisations to effectively reach audiences in the Americas and Europe without compromising speed or brand consistency, PR Newswire has launched enhanced multilingual support for its Amplify platform. This expansion allows public relations, communications, marketing and investor relations teams to generate on-brand, consistent messaging in the regions' native languages within minutes.

Enabling Consistent Messaging Across Languages

Customers have sought an efficient way to expand the reach of their stories to non-English-speaking audiences globally without significantly slowing down their processes. With the new feature and plans for future multilingual enhancements PR Newswire's customers are able to easily create campaign strategies and multichannel content like press releases, blogs, articles and media pitches in the following languages: English (US), English (UK), French (CA), French (FR), German, Spanish and Portuguese.

The expanded multilingual support complements PR Newswire's industry-leading global distribution network and international campaign support. Now, global communications teams can easily plan and create campaign content with a consistent brand voice across regions, ensuring their stories reach their most critical audiences via multiple channels and languages.

In addition to being able to AI-generate new content in-language using the enhanced support capabilities in Amplify, PR Newswire customers can also continue to rely on the company's trusted translation services when distributing their existing press release drafts to global audiences.

Expanding Global Campaign Reach

The announcement marks the latest innovation to the AI-powered multichannel campaign management capabilities within the Amplify platform. Without a centralised strategy tool, brand voice across regions can become fragmented or get "lost in translation," leading to a disjointed global brand identity. Global communications teams can now generate native content variants for their key markets so that they can maintain brand control while empowering local teams.

"Our customers rely on our unparalleled distribution network to reach audiences globally with impact and authenticity," said Matt Brown, PR Newswire President. "This new capability strengthens our decades-long support for in-language global campaigns. We are thrilled to expand the multilingual support within our platform to help our customers generate high-quality, in-language campaign assets with the help of our advanced, proprietary AI.

"This support for additional key languages and more on the way further demonstrates the ways PR Newswire Amplify is transforming how communicators operate, dramatically reducing time-to-market for global campaigns and fostering stronger connections with audiences worldwide."

Enhancing Multichannel Amplification for Brand Stories
