COMUNICATO STAMPA - CONTENUTO PROMOZIONALE

MUMBAI, India and NEW YORK, Feb. 3, 2026 /PRNewswire/ - The International Gemological Institute (IGI), one of the world's largest and most trusted independent diamond grading and certification organizations, today announced the acquisition of American Gemological Laboratories (AGL), a global leader in colored gemstone analysis and provenance reporting. The transaction brings together unmatched global scale and infrastructure with deep scientific expertise, positioning the combined group at the forefront of certification and trust in the global jewelry industry.

The acquisition creates a global platform that combines IGI's industry-leading market reach with AGL's pioneering leadership in colored gemstones. Together, IGI and AGL will deliver enhanced transparency and innovation while preserving the scientific independence and integrity that underpin both organizations.

Tehmasp Printer, Managing Director and Global CEO of IGI, stated, "This is a transformational step for the industry. By combining AGL's scientific leadership with IGI's global platform, we are building a future-ready ecosystem that delivers scale without compromising integrity. Together, we are setting a new global benchmark for consistency in gemstone certification."

Key Highlights:

Founded in 1977, AGL pioneered country-of-origin reporting in the United States and serves leading luxury brands, auction houses, manufacturers, and private collectors worldwide. The transaction strengthens strategic linkages between the U.S. - the world's largest market for fine jewelry - and India, a global hub for gemstone manufacturing.

Christopher Smith, President and Chief Gemologist of AGL, added, "This acquisition represents a pivotal opportunity for AGL to significantly grow its colored stone services. With the support of Blackstone and the international reach of IGI, AGL will improve and expand the standards of integrity and service on a global scale.â?•

Dev Shetty, Founder & CEO of Jemora Group and former executive of Gemfields and Fura Gems, served as a strategic advisor on the transaction.
