Nordic Pharma, Inc. is demonstrating this novel therapy at ASCRS

BERWYN, Pa., April 9, 2026 /PRNewswire/ - Nordic Pharma, Inc., a subsidiary of Nordic Group B.V., announces that it is now shipping cannulas along with its syringes of its LACRIFILL® Canalicular Gel, a novel therapy for dry eye symptoms. The company made the decision to enhance its offering in response to feedback from doctors, and the provided cannulas have been very well received.

The addition comes as the company passes a major milestone: Eye care professionals across the United States have used LACRIFILL® single-use syringes of its proprietary cross-linked hyaluronic acid derivative to treat more than 100,000 patients in less than two years since its introduction.

"As physicians, we must take an active role in controlling our patients' ocular surface health, comfort, and visual outcomes, particularly around eye surgery. LACRIFILL® Canalicular Gel has consistently delivered on its purpose, providing meaningful ocular surface control," said Eric Donnenfeld, MD, Board Chair OCLI Vision and NYU Langone Health. "LACRIFILL is not simply another punctal plug; it is a very different approach to managing the ocular surface. It has been an outstanding addition to my practice."

"Treating ocular surface disease has become an increasingly important part of modern eye care. Using LACRIFILL® Canalicular Gel as a tool to improve dry eye disease has been a true game-changer in our practice—not only for my everyday dry eye patients, but also as part of my surgical patient management," said Mile Brujic, OD, FAAO, Premier Vision Group. "It is an important option to consider, as it not only supports strong visual outcomes but also significantly improves patient comfort. The clinical data supporting use of LACRIFILL is compelling and reinforces the benefits we are seeing in our patients.â•

LACRIFILL comes in a pre-filled syringe with enough gel to treat both upper and lower canaliculi in both eyes. The gel is inserted via a cannula tip placed in the punctum and flows into the lacrimal sac. Syringes are shipped in packages of 10; each package now includes 10 cannulas.

Nordic Pharma launched LACRIFILL Canalicular Gel in the United States in May 2024 after receiving clearance from the Food and Drug Administration to use the gel to temporarily block tear drainage by occluding the canalicular system. In the less than two years since, more than 100,000 patients have been treated with LACRIFILL.

â••We are gratified by the rapid acceptance of LACRIFILL by so many optometrists and ophthalmologists across the country. Itâ•s rewarding to know that our innovative treatment for a condition that affects about 6.8 percent of US adults has provided relief for so many patients in a relatively short time. LACRIFILL represents a movement towards interventional dry eye disease management,â• said Jai Parekh, MD, MBA, Chief Commercial Officer of Eye Care US.
