Shandongâ??s 15th Five-Year Plan drew significant attention from advisors. The province is building four trillion-yuan-level emerging pillar industries of high-end equipment, information technology services, new energy, and new materials, while cultivating four hundred-billion-yuan-level potential industries in artificial intelligence, biomedicine, new energy vehicles, and aerospace and low-altitude economy. It is also making forward-looking plans for future industries such as quantum information and biotechnology.

Representatives from multinational companies including DSM-Firmenich, Siemens, AbbVie, Philips, KPMG, and Veolia offered forward-thinking suggestions on integrating AI with advanced manufacturing, transforming traditional industries, and developing biomedicine and the longevity economy. â??Green and low-carbonâ?• emerged as a key theme. Notably, the Jinan Smart Zero-Carbon Factory co-built by Siemens and Rock Morrison was recognized as Shandongâ??s first pilot â??zero-carbon factoryâ?• under provincial standards. Officials from the Foreign Affairs Office of Shandong Provincial Peopleâ??s Government responded on-site to the advisorsâ?? proposals.

Located at the intersection of the Belt and Road Initiative, Shandong is actively aligning with high-standard international trade rules and expanding into emerging markets including Central Asia, the Middle East, Latin America, and Africa. Advisors expressed strong confidence in Shandongâ??s openness and development potential, calling for deeper economic and trade cooperation between Shandong and partners from Italy, Kenya, Mexico, and ASEAN countries. On the same day, the â??Shandong City Tourâ?• series was launched, with international representatives traveling to Yantai and Weihai for business matchmaking.

Established in December 2021, the Shandong International Trade and Investment Advisors mechanism has appointed 26 prominent figures from the international business community. Over the past five years, advisors have submitted nearly 80 reports. The roundtable has become a vital platform for expanding Shandongâ??s global network of partners.
