COMUNICATO STAMPA - CONTENUTO PROMOZIONALE

CHAM, Switzerland, April 9, 2026 /PRNewswire/ - Landis+Gyr EMEA, formerly part of the Landis+Gyr Group, begins a new chapter as a standalone company, primarily serving customers across Europe, the Middle East and Africa.

Following the completion of the transaction, the EMEA business is now wholly owned by AURELIUS. The new ownership structure provides strategic support and greater operational focus as the company continues to develop its portfolio in advanced metering, network intelligence and digital infrastructure solutions.

With more than 2.800 employees in 19 countries, the organisation operates with the same management team and retains its regional footprint, continuing to play a key role in supporting utilities and infrastructure operators across the region.

"The completion of the transaction marks an important milestone for our company," said Robert Evans, CEO of Landis+Gyr EMEA. "Our new standalone position, supported by AURELIUS, offers a unique opportunity to further unleash the potential of this great business. We are proud of our history, our heritage and expertise developed as part of Landis+Gyr and we continue to serve our customers with greater focus and trusted reliability."

Over the coming months, the company will introduce its new identity, marking the next phase of evolution as a standalone organisation.
