COMUNICATO STAMPA â?? CONTENUTO PROMOZIONALE

LONDON, July 10, 2026 /PRNewswire/ â?? STL (NSE: STLTECH) a leading connectivity solutions provider for AI-ready digital infrastructure, today announced a definitive victory in its European patent dispute with Fujikura Ltd. The European Patent Office (EPO) Technical Board of Appeal at a hearing on 24 June, 2026, has issued a final, binding and non-appealable ruling revoking Fujikuraâ??s European Patent EP 3796060 in its entirety. The ruling resolves the UK patent dispute between the parties in STLâ??s favour.

STLâ??s intellectual property (IP) is built over decades and protected by a 785 patent portfolio spanning major global markets it serves. STL actively co-creates purpose-engineered optical solutions with its customers that power tomorrowâ??s AI-led digital infrastructure.

This ruling has the following positive business implications for STL:

â??STL deeply respects innovation and Intellectual Property, and we strongly protect our IP positions across the globe. This ruling by the EPOâ??s highest appellate body is a powerful affirmation of the strength of our global IP position, the integrity of our R&D and deep technology capability,â?• said Dr. Badri Gomatam, Group CTO, STL. â??Our fully vertically integrated â??Glass to Data Centerâ?? capability ensures unmatched quality control and absolute supply chain resilience for our global customers.â?•
